Centennial Education Foundation’s Shoe Drive gets help from Class of ‘68

The Centennial Educational Foundation’s Shoe Drive had a big boost from the CHS Class of 1968 with their generous cash donation of $950. The timing was perfect as Kmart is having a going out of business sale, which the Foundation was able to take advantage of. Foundation volunteers purchased boxes and buggies of shoes with an average cost of $7.06. Many thanks to the Class of 1968, and Stan Cieota and Ron Pederson for choosing the Foundation for this donation!

The CLOSET now has a great selection of shoes for students and a lot of warmer jackets and coats, especially in elementary boys sizes. If you know of a student that needs shoes, coats and school clothing, vouchers are available in the schools’ counseling offices.

Remember CLOSET to CLOSET when you travel as the Foundation is still collecting travel toiletries that are bagged and given to students when they are shopping for clothes.

For more information on CLOSET to CLOSET, see the attached flyer.

It’s a boy: Congratulations to Centennial Middle School seventh grade ancient history teacher Omeica Hudson and Kizzee Anthony, EA at CMS, on the birth of their first child Theowin Alexander Hudson, who was born on October 11th.

Satellite Office: It seems that Oliver Elementary School has so many tech calls, that they made a desk for Network Administrator Chris Dresel (Photo right) in the Oliver office. It’s a little small, but he seems to like it.

Identity Theft

Protect your customers’ personal information

According to the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC), identity theft is the fastest growing crime in America today. Identity thieves use countless avenues to access personal information, so staying ahead of them takes a commitment to security. Because we handle sensitive customer information, we have a responsibility to protect that information.

It is important that you do your part when handling personal client information to protect our customers and our company. This includes taking security measures both externally and internally so that customer information is shared only with necessary parties.

Computer
Your computer likely contains sensitive customer information. Follow these tips to keep this information secure:

• Never leave passwords where anyone can find them.
• When you step away from your computer, always lock the screen.
• When sending an email with personal data, make sure it is encrypted for security.

Customer Contact
Only gather personal customer information through company-approved channels. Do not use personal email (or if you must, be sure to encrypt the message). Follow company policies to verify the identity of the customer when giving out or changing any personal information. Use discretion when offering or receiving personal information over the phone—this is a common way for thieves to commit identity fraud.

Paperwork
When stepping away from your desk or leaving for the day, do not leave any paperwork with sensitive information lying on your desk. It should be filed in a locked drawer or cabinet. When disposing of personal information materials, use the paper shredder or secure recycling container.

Above all, be aware of the potential for identity theft when handling personal data. If you are ever suspicious of a transaction or conversation you are having, follow your instinct and pursue further verification before proceeding with the customer’s request. Talk to your supervisor if you have a question about procedure or need assistance with a particular transaction. If we all do our part, we can prevent identity fraud from occurring and protect our company and clients.

Be safe and healthy on the job with these helpful tips provided by Brown & Brown Northwest.

“Never bypass company security policies, even with the most familiar clients. Identity theft can occur at any time—most likely when you’re least expecting it.”
